Twin portraits of an alleged killer

Moncton shooting.
Friends speak fondly of man who apparently gave in to obsession

Two contrasting accounts are emerging of the young man suspected of killing three Mounties and injuring two others in a heavily armed rampage Wednesday night.

One is the intelligent, laid-back, home-schooled guitar enthusiast known to friends who grew up alongside 24-year-old Justin Bourque in suburban Moncton.

The other is a radical remake that occurred earlier this year: a man obsessed with gun rights, enraged by police and fixated on global conflicts happening half a world away.

"It was almost like a complete 180 for him," said friend and former workmate Trever Finck. "There was a pretty stark difference."

The new Bourque — the one dressed head-to-toe in army fatigues and toting two high-powered guns — became the subject of an intense police manhunt.

Those who know Bourque are not surprised that he evaded his hunters so long.

One acquaintance who spoke on condition of anonymity said Bourque has "lots of tactical knowledge" and "should be considered military-trained."

A spokesperson for the Department of National Defence has said that Bourque was never a member of the Canadian military.

Bourque has long had an enthusiasm for guns, however, and even before Wednesday's shooting was often seen in military fatigues.

The acquaintance, who last saw Bourque in person two years ago, said: "I know he went into the woods to shoot things, but I'm assuming it (was) targets like cans."

He, like others, is shocked by what Bourque has allegedly done. Up until now, he had left a friendly impression.

"Nobody expected this."

But as events unfolded after supper hour in suburban Moncton, the situation became more clear.

"When they started giving the description (of the shooter), he was the only person I could think of that would dress like that," Finck said, adding Bourque had two guns stored in the home he shared with his parents and siblings. According to Finck, Bourque owned a Chinese M-14 rifle and a shotgun, the latter purchased in the last few months.

Just before that, in March, Bourque was looking for friends to move in with. He ended up in a trailer park.

Finck and other friends were not aware of any mental-health problems, despite Bourque's apparent obsession with guns and police. Rather, they say Bourque spoke openly of having moved from marijuana to drugs like heroin.

The RCMP say Bourque has no criminal record.

Premier Wall adds three new faces during cabinet shuffle

'Agenda hasn't changed.' New faces won't hold back promises kept by the party, he says

SARAH TAGUIAM
Metro in Regina

Premier Brad Wall has shaken up his cabinet, keeping only eight of its members in their same portfolios.

Health Minister Dustin Duncan, Economy Minister Bill Boyd and Finance Minister and Deputy Premier Ken Krawetz, who recently announced he won't run in the next Saskatchewan general election in 2016, are among those who retained their posts in the shuffle on Thursday.

"The people have changed ... but the agenda hasn't changed," Wall said after the ministers were sworn in at Government House in Regina.

"We have promises we made ... and we're going to continue to keep those."

Don McMorris has moved from the highways and infrastructure portfolio to responsibility for the Saskatchewan Liquor and Gaming Authority and the Lean initiative.

Four other ministers — Kevin Doherty, Donna Harpauer, Nancy Heppner and Tim McMillan — have also changed portfolios.

The switches, however, show that the Saskatchewan Party lacks reliable and capable caucus members, according to NDP Leader Cam Broten.

"The fact that Mr. Wall had to keep certain ministers around that have caused problems and where there have been problems in their ministries ... indicates a lack of bench strength," Broten charged, zeroing in on health and education initiatives that have been under fire.

Broten added that the cabinet fails to adequately represent women and the cities of Moose Jaw, Prince Albert and Yorkton.

Scott Moe, MLA for Rosthern-Shellbrook, right, is sworn in as Saskatchewan's environment minister on Thursday at Government House in Regina. Moe, along with MLAs Jennifer Campeau and Mark Docherty, is one of the new members of Premier Brad Wall's cabinet. NDP Leader Cam Broten, inset, says the Saskatchewan Party caucus is short of reliable members who are good for cabinet positions. SARAH TAGUIAM/METRO IN REGINA

June Draude and Rob Norris, who held the social services and advanced education posts, respectively, have been removed from the cabinet. Both recently confirmed they won't run for re-election once their current terms are over.

Ken Cheveldayoff, meanwhile, has been shifted from the environment portfolio to government house leader.

MLAs Jennifer Campeau, Mark Docherty and Scott Moe have been moved from the backbenches to the cabinet.

Including the premier, the cabinet continues to have 18 members — the size it's been since Wall's Saskatchewan Party took power in 2007.

Contract roofer killed in deadly fall from house

A man who was doing roofing is dead after suffering a severe head injury in a fall from a home in western Saskatchewan.

RCMP say Perry K. McBee, a 54-year-old Biggar resident, plunged from a roof Tuesday morning near the community of Springwater, about 130 kilometres west of Saskatoon.

McBee was taken by ambulance to an area hospital prior to a medical airlift, but died before he could be transferred. Police say he had been doing contract work on the home along with another person when he fell to the ground. Mounties say they do not consider the death suspicious. Provincial Occupational Health and Safety officials are investigating.

Métis group hired sex offender, documents show

The Metis National Council enlisted a convicted sex offender in 2011 to work with survivors of residential schools, the church-run institutions where children endured physical, emotional and sexual abuse.

The Canadian Press obtained a copy of the council's contract with Norman Hansen of the northern Saskatchewan village of Buffalo Narrows, as well as provincial court records showing two prior sexual assault convictions. Hansen, 70, declined to speak to The Canadian Press about his work for the council or his criminal record.

Reached by phone, he hung up when asked if the council knew of the convictions when it contracted him for "community liaison, information gathering and videography services."

Court records show Hansen was convicted of two sexual assaults against two women in or around Saskatoon — one in February or March of 2003, the second a month later.

Hansen was sentenced to three years in a federal jail in June 2004 and prohibited from owning a variety of weapons, including crossbows and guns, for 10 years.

‘God accepted our prayer’

Ashfaq Afridi has lived in Canada for nearly 28 years, but has struggled with his wife to bring their adopted three-year-old son Ajjab to Saskatchewan from Pakistan. He was all smiles on Thursday as the province signed a letter of non-objection supporting the Afridis’ cause. JACOB MORGAN/METRO

Continents apart.
Happy ending on horizon for local family seeking reunion in Saskatoon

JACOB MORGAN

A legal battle that has kept a Saskatchewan family separated across continents could be nearing its end.

Social Services Minister June Draude stood alongside Ashfaq Afridi and lawyer Haidah Amirzadeh in Saskatoon on Thursday to announce that the provincial government is certain that Ashfaq’s three-year-old adopted son, Ajjab, will be able to move from Pakistan to Saskatchewan.

“We have received additional information that allows us to sign the no-objection letter,” Draude said at a provincial cabinet office.

“The information will now go to the federal government.”

She added that she hopes to see the boy home within a few weeks.

Amirzadeh, who has represented the Afridis on a pro-bono basis, said Ashfaq’s wife Waheeda went to Pakistan for Ajjab when he was born and is overjoyed at the news.

“I have spoken to her for the past two-and-a-half years and she has cried many, many times,” Amirzadeh said.

“But today her cry was a good cry.”

One hurdle in the case, she said, was a perceived incompatibility between adoption procedures in Canada and an Islamic notion of guardianship in Pakistan.

To secure the required letter of non-objection supporting Ajjab’s bid to Ottawa for permanent residency, Amirzadeh said she had to provide a Pakistani expert “to clarify that the concept is the same.”

Ashfaq and Waheeda are Canadian citizens. They could not have children of their own and sought to adopt Ajjab following his birth in 2010 — before Canada halted adoptions from Pakistan last July — from Waheeda’s sister.

“She couldn’t afford to keep (her) seventh child,” Ashfaq explained. “For that reason, we stepped in.”

He has stayed in Canada to work during the ordeal and met his son for the first time in October on a trip to Turkey, where Waheeda and Ajjab had travelled for respite from turmoil in the Pakistani city of Peshawar.

“I was telling my son that he’s going to come one day,” Ashfaq said. “God accepted our prayer.”

Saskatchewan mourns dead N.B. RCMP officers

Saskatchewanians are joining the residents of Moncton, N.B. as they mourn three RCMP officers shot and killed in a tragedy that has rattled the country.

A gunman fired at the Mounties in Moncton on Wednesday evening in an ambush, killing three and injuring two others. Police continued on Thursday to search for the shooter.

“We proclaim ourselves as the home of the Mounties ... and we train every single Mountie in F Division, so there’s a special connection between Saskatchewan people and the Mounties all over this country,” Premier Brad Wall said on Thursday.

All Saskatchewan government buildings lowered their flags to half-mast on Thursday in honour of the fallen officers.

“Right now we have a united front, but it’s just too soon in the events and it wouldn’t be appropriate for us to comment,” said RCMP F Division spokeswoman Sgt. Pharanae Jaques.

A chapel at the RCMP Depot Division training academy in Regina has been open since Wednesday night. A collection box has been set up there to raise funds for the families of the officers who were killed.

The shooting was the deadliest attack on RCMP since 2005, when a gunman fatally shot four officers in the area of Mayerthorpe, Alta.

“It’s hard for everybody in the country, and I can’t even imagine what it’s like for people in New Brunswick,” Wall said, “but we feel it very much here in Saskatchewan, so we’re offering our thoughts and prayers to the families of the fallen and those who are injured.”

‘Worst nightmare’ plays out in Moncton

RCMP shootings. Police from across Canada brought in to help track down 24-year-old suspected shooter Justin Bourque

An RCMP officer rests his head at a roadblock in Moncton, N.B. on Thursday, a day after three RCMP officers were killed and two injured by a gunman. Roger Brown, the Mounties’ commanding officer in New Brunswick, said Thursday the manhunt for 24-year-old Justin Bourque was “your worst nightmare.” ANDREW VAUGHAN/THE CANADIAN PRESS

A nerve-racking search for a heavily armed gunman continued Thursday in Moncton, nearly a full day after three New Brunswick Mounties were shot dead and two others were injured in one of the worst mass shootings in the RCMP’s history.

The suspect, Justin Bourque, 24, was last spotted Thursday morning but he evaded capture after he went into a wooded area, the RCMP said.

“This is working through your worst nightmare,” Assistant Commissioner Roger Brown, the Mounties’ commanding officer in New Brunswick, told a news conference.

Brown appealed for public calm in a city that has been under a virtual siege since Wednesday evening.

“This is a very, very dangerous situation,” he said.

Officers were unable to confirm the identity of the suspect on two other occasions when he might have been sighted on Thursday, Supt. Marlene Snowman said.

Police, including tactical officers, began their manhunt for the shooter Wednesday at around 7:30 p.m. when they responded to a call about a man walking along a road with what was believed to be a gun.

After the call, shots were fired and officers called for backup, Snowman said.

Brown said police officers from across the country have been brought in to help arrest the suspect.

“The RCMP family is hurting,” he said. “Greater Moncton is hurting as is New Brunswick as is our country.”

Police urged people with any information on Bourque’s whereabouts to call 911. The Moncton man was wearing military camouflage and carrying two rifles in a picture of him released by police on Twitter on Wednesday night.

Snowman said Bourque was carrying high-powered firearms, is not known to the police and investigators were trying to piece together his background.

Residents in the area where police searched were urged to stay inside their homes and lock their doors.

Police also warned people to expect roadblocks and traffic disruptions. Schools and government offices were closed, buses were pulled off the roads and surgeries at the Moncton Hospital were cancelled.

Brown said the two wounded officers underwent surgery in hospital Thursday. Cpl. Chantal Farrah later said that one of those officers was released. The injuries suffered by the other officer were not considered life-threatening.

Brown said he met with the families of the officers who were shot earlier in the day.

“As you can all imagine, they’re hurting,” said Brown. “There’s actually no way to describe the level of hurt.”

The identities of the officers who were shot have not been released by police.

But late Thursday, the National Post identified one of the officers fatally shot as Const. Dave Ross, a police services dog handler with the RCMP. The newspaper quoted the sister-in-law of the man’s wife as saying he had a young son, with another child expected in September.

Fearful Moncton residents waiting anxiously for life to return to normal

'I just want this to be over.' Affected locals 'taking no chances' as they hole up in their homes until shooting suspect is apprehended

HALEY RYAN
Metro in Halifax

Will Njoku said, via Twitter, "I just want this to be over," as he and hundreds of residents waited for police to find the man suspected of having shot and killed three RCMP officers.

Njoku spoke with media outlets from his home in Moncton following the shooting Wednesday night, sharing his experience as helicopters flew overhead and police searched the neighbourhood for any sign of the gunman.

"I just want this to be over for all of us.... Worried for my neighbors," Njoku tweeted Wednesday.

Heavily armed RCMP officers searched through the night for Justin Bourque, 24, who is suspected of wounding two other Mounties.

Police asked residents in a large section of the city to remain indoors until the suspect was found.

Around 11:30 a.m. Thursday, Njoku said via Twitter he and his family had spent the night in their basement, then moved upstairs and locked themselves in a bathroom.

"Taking no chances," he tweeted.

In an email to Metro, Njoku said he would not speak with media outlets until his family is safe. As of press time Thursday, Bourque had not been found.

A former Yarmouth County woman living in Moncton was also on lockdown, and said there will forever be a sense of "innocence lost" in the city her family calls home.

Audrey Vaughan, who lives in Moncton with her husband, Jim, and their son Jimmy told the Yarmouth Vanguard Thursday morning no one had gotten much sleep.

"There's just so many little patches of wooded areas and green space, and (Bourque) knows the area, he's from here. Any little noise and you're looking out the window," she said.

Vaughan said it's incredibly sad to think about the RCMP officers who died in the line of duty, and her heart "just broke" thinking of the families and fellow Mounties who had to continue the search.

Vaughan said Moncton is "just not going to look the same again."

"That's the hard part. He's taken away something from all of us," she said.

'Lots of anxiety'

High school trip turns into scary ordeal

A Nova Scotia high school band trip to Moncton took a dramatic turn when the students found themselves in a city locked down and full of fear.

About 40 students and five chaperones were eating dinner at a hotel in the city Wednesday night when the shooting rampage that left three Mounties dead broke out. The hotel was on lockdown for several hours before the students were shuttled back to their hotel around 11:30 p.m. The trip began on Tuesday and was set to end today.

"Lots of anxiety for both the parents and the students," said Halifax Regional School Board spokesperson Doug Hadley. "They were very anxious to get on the bus and come home."

A planned performance scheduled for Thursday was cancelled and the students arrived back at Sackville High just after noon. The bus was quickly unloaded and students were given the rest of the day off.

The students were aware of what was going on in Moncton, but weren't particularly close to the site of the shootings and didn't feel in real danger.

"We felt safe, it wasn't happening right where we were," said Chloe Provencal as she left the school property to meet her waiting mother. "Being nervous is a natural reaction, but we were fine."

For parents who were watching the news unfold back at home, there were a lot of frayed nerves and anxious phone calls.

"This was going to be their last trip together, and for it to end like this is horrible," said Daphne Reid, whose sons Steven and Chandler were on the trip.

Boko Haram extremists reportedly massacre 200 Nigerian villagers

Military inaction?
A community leader said residents pleaded with local government to send soldiers

Boko Haram militants dressed as soldiers killed at least 200 civilians in three villages in northeastern Nigeria and the military failed to intervene even though it was warned that an attack was imminent, witnesses said on Thursday.

A community leader who witnessed the killings on Monday said residents of the Gwoza local government district in Borno state had pleaded for the military to send soldiers to protect the area after they heard that militants were about to attack, but help didn't arrive. The killings occurred in Danjara, Agapalwa and Antagara.

"We all thought they were the soldiers that we earlier reported to that the insurgents might attack us," said a community leader who escaped the massacre and fled to Maiduguri, Borno's state capital.

The militants arrived in Toyota Hilux pickup trucks commonly used by the military — and told the civilians they were soldiers "and we are here to protect you all," the same tactic used by the group when they kidnapped more than 300 girls from a school in the town of Chibok on April 15.

After people gathered in the centre on the orders of the militants, "they begin to shout 'Allahu Akbar, Allahu Akbar' on top of their voices, then they begin to fire at the people continuously for a very long time until all that gathered were all dead," said the witness, who did not want to be named.

Death toll mounts

Thousands have been killed in the five-year Boko Haram insurgency.

- More than 2,000 Nigerians have been killed so far this year.

The slaughter was confirmed by both Mohammed Ali Ndume, a senator representing Borno and whose hometown is Gwoza, and by a top security official in Maiduguri who insisted on anonymity because he isn't allowed to speak to the media.

It took a few days for word of the massacres to reach Maiduguri because travel on the roads is dangerous and phone connections are poor or nonexistent.

The community leader wasn't shot because "I was going round to inform people that the soldiers had come and they wanted to address us," he said. As people were fleeing, other gunmen lurked outside the villages on motorcycles and mowed them down, he said.

The villages attacked on Monday are in the Gwoza local government, a regional political centre whose emir was killed in a Boko Haram ambush last week. Emirs are religious and traditional rulers who have been targeted for speaking out against Boko Haram's extremism. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

G7 in Brussels. Harper, Obama oppose leaders' plans to meet Putin

Prime Minister Stephen Harper joined U.S. President Barack Obama in opposing the plans of some G7 leaders to meet Russian President Vladimir Putin this week, The Canadian Press has learned.

During two days of closed-door G7 leaders' talks in Brussels, Harper and Obama were firmly aligned against the plans of several fellow leaders to sit down with Putin, a source said Thursday.

Putin's imminent arrival has exposed cracks in an otherwise united G7 front that produced a public declaration denouncing his annexation of Crimea and provocations in eastern Ukraine.

British Prime Minister David Cameron, French President Francois Hollande and German Chancellor Angela Merkel are to meet Putin this week and engage him on the Ukraine crisis.

Seattle. Student disarms gunman; one dead

A lone gunman armed with a shotgun opened fire Thursday in a building at a small Seattle university, fatally wounding one person before a student subdued him with pepper spray as he tried to reload, Seattle police said.

A student building monitor at Seattle Pacific University disarmed the gunman after he entered the foyer at Otto Miller Hall, and several other students jumped on top of him and pinned him down until police officers arrived, police said.

A 19-year-old man died at Harborview Medical Center. Three other people were injured.

A critically injured 20-year-old woman was taken to surgery, hospital spokeswoman Susan Gregg said.

A 24-year-old man and a 22-year-old man were in satisfactory condition. Gregg says one of those two men was not shot.

None of the victims was immediately identified.

Police said they had arrested one man. None of the four who were brought to the hospital was the arrested man, Gregg said.

Police initially reported that they were searching for a second suspect.

They later said no one else was involved.

Study says booze consumption is under-reported

Up to 75% too low. Research shows people reported about one-third of their real alcohol consumption

A study says Canadians lowball the amount of alcohol they drink.
ADAM BERRY/GETTY IMAGES

It turns out Canadians lowball the amount of alcohol they consume by up to 75 per cent, especially when it comes to wine.

A study by the University of Victoria's Centre for Addictions Research says surveys of alcohol consumption are crucial when it comes to estimating disease and injury caused by people's favourite recreational drug.

But the centre's director, Tim Stockwell, says it's easier for society to ignore the risks associated with alcohol consumption when policies are based on a gross underestimation of how much people actually drink.

The study published in the journal Addiction includes three years of data from daily Health Canada phone surveys of 45,000 people across the country between 2008 and 2012.

Stockwell says Canadians were asked how many drinks they'd had over the last week, the last month, the last year and then the day before — a question that provided the most accurate amount based on memory.

He says the results showed that people reported only about one-third of their consumption when the amounts were compared to how much alcohol was actually sold every year — 8.2 litres of pure alcohol per person aged 15 and over.

New evidence on moon's birth

A new study strengthens the notion that our moon was created by a collision between Earth and a planet-sized object some 4.5 billion years ago.

German scientists studied moon rocks gathered by astronauts nearly a half-century ago in the Apollo 11, 12 and 16 missions. They analyzed various kinds of oxygen atoms and found the moon rocks have a different make-up than Earth rocks. That fits with the idea that the moon would contain material from the object that struck Earth. The results also suggest that the moon may be a 50-50 mix of material from the object and Earth. The study was published Thursday in Science.

Ah geez, thanks.

7 WestJet. They've done it again, with another viral video. In this tear-jerker, it shows an amazing early Father's Day gift they gave to a hard-working dad, Marc Grimard, from Saskatoon. They surprised Marc by flying him to Edmonton to visit his sick child, Joel, who has a congenital heart condition and is staying at a Ronald McDonald House there with his mother. Beautiful and touching vid.

8 #HatzOnCatz. The hashtag went viral after teen social media star Matthew Espinosa asked his fans to send him #HatzOnCatz photos for a contest. Soon enough, people from around the world were sending silly and cute cat-in-the-hat photos. Heck, I almost bought a kitty and Tilley hat just to be part of this. But my Maltese shih tzu, Roxy, nixed that. #HatzOnDogz, she says.

2,000+ attempt Guinness record for World Environment Day

More than 2,000 people, mostly students wearing their school uniforms, gathered in Nepal's capital on Thursday in a bid to set a world record for the largest collective tree-hugging event.

Parliament members, office workers and even Buddhist monks also took part in the attempt, joining the students at a park on the outskirts of Kathmandu.

The previous Guinness World Record for most people hugging trees simultaneously was 936 in Portland, Ore., last July.

You say that like it's a good thing

"Tree hugger" is usually a pejorative term, but there's evidence that getting cosy with the woods is good for you.

- A study by Japanese researchers found that when people participated in Shinrin-yoku (Japanese for "forest bathing," or going on forest walks), they had significantly higher immune function responses afterwards.

The dog days are coming

REBECCA WILLIAMS

Let's celebrate the glorious day that is Friday.

You're almost there, free of your desk, never-ending emails and the dreaded copy machine. The world — or weekend — is your oyster. Head to the beach! Run around, get sand stuck in your paws and let your tail wag.

Wait, that's just this dog.

Well, take a cue from Ellie the Great Dane anyway, and let loose! Feel the wind in your fur, or rather, hair.

It's 'kawaii' overload with Pepper the robot

Will sell for $1,900 US. Japanese billionaire kicked the 'kawaii', or cute culture, up a notch with humanoid robot

A cooing, gesturing humanoid on wheels that can decipher emotions has been unveiled in Japan by billionaire Masayoshi Son, who says robots should be tender and make people smile.

Son's mobile phone company Softbank said Thursday that the robot it has dubbed Pepper will go on sale in Japan in February for $1,900 US. Overseas sales plans are under consideration but undecided.

The machine, which has no legs but has gently gesticulating hands, appeared on a stage in a Tokyo suburb, cooing and humming. It dramatically touched hands with Son in a Genesis or E.T. moment.

Son, who told the crowd that his longtime dream was to go into the personal robot business, said Pepper has been programmed to read the emotions of people around it by recognizing expressions and voice tones.

"Our aim is to develop affectionate robots that can make people smile," he said.

Cuddly robots are not new in Japan, a nation dominated by "kawaii," or cute culture, but no companion robot has emerged as a major market success yet.

Japanese electronics and entertainment company Sony Corp. discontinued the Aibo pet-dog robot in 2006, despite outcry from its fans.

In 2013, Rogers got 175,000 requests for customer info.

Rogers Communications says it received almost 175,000 requests for customer information from government and police agencies last year, becoming the first major Canadian service provider to divulge the extent of its data sharing with authorities.

About half of the requests in 2013 were to confirm a customer's name and address, Rogers said Thursday in a report that comes amid public pressure on Internet and phone companies to reveal details of their dealings with law enforcement.

Rogers says it responds to name and address requests so police do not issue a warrant to the wrong person.

Amazon, Hachette tiff ratchets up

On one side of a major publishing feud is Amazon.com, the industry's biggest book seller.

On the other side is a leading New York publisher few readers have heard of, Hachette Book Group, and some Hachette authors virtually all readers have heard of: J.K. Rowling, James Patterson, Malcolm Gladwell and, most recently, Stephen Colbert.

Saying that he's not just mad at Amazon, but "mad prime," Colbert assailed the online retailer on his Comedy Central program Wednesday.

Amazon is in a contract dispute with Hachette Book Group and has been delaying shipments for some Hachette books, including Colbert's America Again.

RICHARD CROUSE AND MARK BRESLIN

Emily Blunt and Tom Cruise star in the time-travelling sci-fi thriller Edge of Tomorrow. CONTRIBUTED

Synopsis

Set at the height of a worldwide battle between the human race and seemingly indestructible aliens called Mimics, Tom Cruise plays William Cage, a marketing genius whose ads have inspired millions of people to enlist by telling them the story of hero Rita (Emily Blunt), a legendary warrior with more Mimic notches on her belt than the rest of the army combined. When pressed into combat, something strange happens. Cage gets caught in a time loop, reliving the same day over and over. Eventually he'll learn enough to beat this unbeatable foe. Trouble is, he has to die every day...

Clever and entertaining. But unlike his character, Cruise's latest film doesn't have the ability to re-do its more lacklustre moments

Richard: Mark, two thirds of Edge of Tomorrow is as un-Cruise-like a movie as Tom has ever made. The Groundhog Day been-there, done-that section of the film is inventive, often played for laughs and presents Cruise in a way we've rarely ever seen him — as a coward. It's a refreshing twist for him and gives him a chance to exercise his rarely used comedic chops. You know he's going to turn heroic sooner or later, but it's a blast to see him do something just outside his usual wheelhouse.

Mark: Richard, I enjoyed his cowardly weasel schtick as much as you. I didn't find the Groundhog Day type plot as inventive, though — it's been done in other movies like Source Code and About Time, but the mashup with Starship Troopers was different. The problem I had was that the necessary repetitiveness became inevitably boring after a while, and I felt like I was watching someone slowly get very good at a violent video game.

RC: It does rely a bit too heavily on video game-style violence at the end, but I have to disagree with you on the repetitiveness of the time loop. I thought director Doug Liman figured out clever and entertaining ways to show the same thing over and over, keeping it exciting with interesting editing and changing perspectives. The first two reels are packed with energy and invention. It's only when the conventions that made the story enticing are put aside in the last reel that the movie becomes a standard Cruise action flick. A good Cruise action flick but still more standard than the promising first hour.

MB: Cruise has been in some dogs lately, but this isn't one of them. And normally I would have dismissed the last third as too conventional, but at least it's the only part of the movie that puts Cruise and the viewer on the same level — neither knows what's going to happen next. I just found the time-loop a bit boring, which I also felt in Groundhog Day. I'm in the minority here, Richard, and I know it. What did you think of Emily Blunt?

RC: I'm a fan, but this is something different for her, and for action movies in general. Big budget blockbusters don't usually make room for female characters unless they are sidekicks or girlfriends. Here Blunt avoids being objectified and is as strong, if not stronger than Cruise.

MB: I also liked Bill Paxton. Even liked watching him do the same dialogue again and again, but with a growing sense of befuddlement and disassociation as the scenes progress.

Ayoade on The Double and why twice is nice

Take two. The Double director delves into Dostoyevsky and the duality of an office drone's dreary days

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News in Hollywood

Director Richard Ayoade follows up his acerbic teen indie debut Submarine with something completely different: The clever, inventive and highly stylized The Double, starring a pair of Jesse Eisenbergs and Mia Wasikowska as the object of their affection in a story based on Fyodor Dostoyevsky's novel. And that's not the only highbrow influence involved.

Richard Ayoade CONTRIBUTED

Friends keep asking me if The Double is anything like Submarine, but it's quite different, isn't it?

With Submarine, the idea of how it was filmed came from what it was about, really, and with this it would be someone who would imagine themselves in a certain esthetic. This [character] felt like someone needed to exist in a certain environment to feel this, and that environment should represent their feelings more. You know that painter Giorgio de Chirico? He was a symbolist painter and created these odd landscapes that came more out of dreams and nightmares. More that kind of a world, where you have something that's impossible but creates an emotion, like having a building that looks like it's night but with sunlight around it it creates a feeling that could not exist realistically or represent something in reality.

How was it directing two distinct Jesse Eisenberg performances?

Really, as silly as it sounds, it just takes longer because you have to rehearse everything twice. So you rehearse as one character once then rehearse as the other character, but probably as a result you go through the scenes much more carefully than you ordinarily would. And the other thing that's tricky is you never see it. You will never simultaneously see them together in a rehearsal. The rehearsal process was more similar to the feeling you have with shooting where you go, "That seems good, and when that's put together with this, it will be good, but I haven't seen it together yet." But he's very brilliant and intelligent and very thorough and he has that ability that actors who do plays have to repeat things without them becoming rote.

Cox, 49, lives up to... er... in Cougar Town

MELINDA TAUB
Metro World News in New York City

Courteney Cox really does inhabit Cougar Town: The former Friend, 49, is reportedly set to marry Snow Patrol guitarist Johnny McDaid, who's 12 years her junior.

Though the two have been dating for less than a year, things have been going so well that they're discussing getting engaged, insiders say.

"Johnny loves her daughter Coco, and he wants to marry Courteney. They have discussed getting engaged and everyone thinks it is going to happen," a source tells Page Six.

Coco is Cox's 10-year-old daughter with her first husband David Arquette. They were married for 14 years, divorcing in 2013 after a long and rocky separation. Cox and McDaid met through Cox's close friend Jennifer Aniston, who apparently approves of the relationship. "All of Courteney's friends love Johnny, which is great because Jen wasn't so fond of David Arquette," the source says.

Ha! Poor, poor David Arquette. I'm glad Jennifer Aniston isn't best friends with my boyfriend. I feel certain I wouldn't pass muster. I can't even play guitar.

Dr. Dre buys $40M pad

If Dr. Dre is looking to downplay reports that he's basically a billionaire now, his latest real estate purchase isn't helping.

The rap mogul has reportedly closed on the $40 million mega-mansion in Brentwood, Calif., previously owned by Gisele Bundchen and Tom Brady, according to E! News. "He's about to close on the house (that he) and his wife, Nicole, purchased," a source says. The 18,700 square-foot estate sits on four acres and has five bedrooms and nine bathrooms, plus a home gym, solar panels and a chicken coop. As for his wealth, Forbes recently listed Dre as the wealthiest hip-hop artist of 2014, with a net worth of $550 million. But the recent sale of the Beats Electronics business — which he co-founded — to Apple could push him past the billion mark.

Justin Bieber

Racist vids haunt Biebs

Justin Bieber's past keeps coming back to haunt him, as yet another video has surfaced showing the then-14-year-old singer parodying his One Less Lonely Girl hit by using a racist slur instead, according to the Sun.

Sources say his team has known about the video for years but refused to pay the $500,000 demanded by whoever ended up leaking it.

As is becoming his custom, Bieber was quick to apologize, the second time he's done so for a racist video from his past in less than a week. "Facing my mistakes from years ago has been one of the hardest things I've ever dealt with," he says in the new statement.

Back in the '80s, Bob and Doug McKenzie turned our appreciation of a cold brew into something as iconically Canadian as playing street hockey or sewing a maple leaf on your backpack.

In this age of innovative craft beer, two other Canucks have taken our liquid history a little more seriously. Alan McLeod and Jordan St. John's new book Ontario Beer: A Heady History of Brewing from the Great Lakes to the Hudson Bay (The History Press, $21.99) is a lovingly researched look back at the life and times of Ontario's vibrant brewing culture.

Finding a beer from that province with national distribution, not made by a big-time brewery, can be tough. While Creemore Springs' Premium Lager (473 ml, $2.85 - $3.99) may be part of the Molson family, it's kept its regional personality with a shot of malt and light hops. It's well-rounded and session worthy (meaning you can enjoy a few in one sitting).

It's a great barbecue beer, meeting sweet and savoury flavours somewhere right in the middle.

When in doubt, wrap your app in prosciutto

Baked Prosciutto-Wrapped Jalapeno Poppers. There is a simple way to slim down these traditionally fat-laden bites

This recipe serves six. MATTHEW MEAD/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Standard jalapeno poppers are thumb-sized hot peppers stuffed with cream cheese and cheddar cheese, then breaded and deep-fried. Yummy, but most home cooks aren't too excited for the mess of deep-frying. That's why there also is a baked version — half a jalapeno stuffed with cheese and wrapped in bacon.

Both types are delicious, but neither is all that healthy. So this version delivers gratification without overdoing it.

From a culinary point of view, jalapeno poppers make complete sense. Nothing tames a chili's heat like dairy.

That's why so many cultures serve their fiery entrées with dairy as a side dish. Mexicans team up spicy tortillas with crema. Indians serve hot curries with yogurt-based raita. And that's why cheese is right at home in a jalapeno popper. But it doesn't have to be high-fat cheese. The fresh goat cheese in this recipe delivers the required creaminess, while a modest amount of Parmigiano-Reggiano delivers the required flavour.

Brighten up the filling with scallions and lemon zest, then wrap the stuffed jalapeno in prosciutto. Though it has a lot less fat than bacon, prosciutto boasts big pork flavour. And when it's baked, as it is here, it's nice and crispy, which eliminates the need to coat the pepper with bread crumbs.

Ingredients

- 4 oz fresh goat cheese
- 1 oz grated Parmigiano-Reggiano cheese
- 1/4 cup finely chopped scallion greens
- 2 tsp grated lemon zest
- 6 jalapeno peppers
- 3 oz (12 slices) prosciutto

1. Heat the oven to 450 F. Line a rimmed baking sheet with foil, then coat it with cooking spray.

2. In a medium bowl, combine the goat cheese, Parmigiano-Reggiano, scallion greens and lemon zest. Halve the jalapenos lengthwise and carefully remove the ribs and seeds (wear rubber gloves if necessary to protect your hands). Stuff each half with the cheese mixture, being sure to use all of the cheese mixture.

3. Wrap 1 slice of prosciutto around each stuffed jalapeno half, overlapping the ends of the prosciutto on the bottom of the jalapeno. Arrange the poppers on the prepared baking sheet, then bake on the oven's centre rack until the prosciutto is slightly crispy, about 15 minutes.

Jays swing Tigers by tail for sweep

MLB. Toronto has won 19 of its last 23 games, breaking out brooms against Detroit, Oakland and Boston

John Gibbons was all smiles in the visiting manager's office after his Toronto Blue Jays wrapped up yet another sweep of one of the American League's most successful teams.

"We're feeling good right now," Gibbons said. "We're confident, and we're playing good baseball. We're rolling."

Juan Francisco and Brett Lawrie hit consecutive home runs in the sixth inning off Justin Verlander, and the Blue Jays completed a three-game sweep of the Detroit Tigers with a 7-3 victory Thursday. The AL East-leading Blue Jays have won 19 of 23, including sweeps of defending champion Boston, AL West-leading Oakland and AL Central-leading Detroit.

"It's a great atmosphere — we've got a lot of positivity in here," Lawrie said. "Everyone likes to have fun, and everybody's comfortable with one another."

J.A. Happ (5-2) allowed three runs and seven hits in 6 1/3 innings for Toronto. Casey Janssen got the final out for his 10th save in 11 chances. He needed only one pitch to retire Nick Castellanos on a line drive to left with two on.

Melky Cabrera also homered for the Blue Jays.

Verlander (6-5) allowed six runs — five earned — and eight hits in seven innings. He walked four and struck out four. Toronto scored three runs each in the fourth and sixth innings.

"My fastball was great today, but I just missed some offspeed pitches," Verlander said. "If I execute those four or five pitches, this would have been a fantastic game. I feel like I'm turning the corner with the mechanical adjustments I've made. I know the results don't reflect that, but I felt great out there."

With the score tied at 3, Adam Lind drew a leadoff walk in the sixth. Francisco followed with a homer to right, and Lawrie's drive to left made it 6-3.

"Against a guy like that, you can't really be on your heels," said Lawrie, who did not have an at-bat against Verlander before Thursday. "You've got to be ready to go. Worked a couple good at-bats against him today, and ended up putting one in play, and it ended up being big for us."

It was the 10th homer of the season for both Francisco and Lawrie. Toronto has hit a major league-leading 87. The Blue Jays won despite the absence of slugger Edwin Encarnacion, who missed the game with a back issue. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Jays pick pitcher, catcher in Round 1

The Toronto Blue Jays looked to improve their battery at Major League Baseball's first-year amateur draft, selecting pitcher Jeff Hoffman ninth overall and catcher Max Pentecost 11th overall.

Hoffman, 21, played for East Carolina University with a 3.26 earned-run average but had Tommy John surgery on May 14.

Pentecost, 21, is a six-foot-two, 191-pounder who has hit .342 through three seasons at Kennesaw University. THE CANADIAN PRESS

French Open

Bouchard bested by Sharapova

Canada's Eugenie Bouchard played like someone who belonged in the final four of a Grand Slam on Thursday.

She gave Maria Sharapova a stiff challenge at the French Open before the Russian veteran pulled away late for a 4-6, 7-5, 6-2 victory, derailing Bouchard's attempt to become the first Canadian to reach a major singles final in the Open era.

As painful as the defeat was for the 20-year-old from Westmount, Que., it will go down as another valuable learning experience on the heels of her first Grand Slam semifinal appearance at this year's Australian Open.

A look of dejection was etched on Bouchard's face as she left the court.

"It's always disappointing to be a bit off. I needed to be aggressive and go for my shots," she said.
